DETAILED ACTION

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 9/3/2002 has been entered.

Applicant's amendment received September 3, 2002 has been entered and applicant's remarks considered. The pending claims are claims 7, 19-26.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 17, 19-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nakahara et al. Nakahara et al. disclose compositions comprising lubricating oils synthesized from esters combined with various polyols and linear and branched mono- and di- carboxylic acids, said oils mixed with fluorocarbon refrigerants. The glycols and carboxylic acids used are listed in columns 3 and 4 and include nearly all claimed. See also col 1 line 46 to col 2 line 48. Regarding the claims 17, 19-26, esters of all of the claimed polyols are disclosed in col 4, the individual mono- and di- carboxylic acids are listed in columns 3 and 4. Patentee claims and even exemplifies the formation of mixed esters. See example 10 where HPHP (hydroxypivalic acid neopentyl glycol monoester) is combined with neopentyl glycol, succinic acid and 2-ethylhexanoic acid, which is the in situ process as claimed. Note that the HPHP is mixed in a proportion such that it is at least 50% of the polyol residue of the ester mixture as claimed. The two acids, a dibasic and a monobasic, both fall within the scope of those instantly claimed. The example differs from the instant claims because the glycol used in this example is not one of the glycols instantly claimed.

It would have been obvious to the skilled artisan to substitute one of the claimed polyols for neopentyl glycol in the process of Nakahara's claim 10 with the expectation of equivalent results because patentee teaches the equivalence of all of the claimed polyols, (trimethylol propane, trimethylolethane, pentaerythritol and 2,2,4-trimethylpentadiol) to the neopentyl glycol used in example 10. See col 4 lines 26 et seq. Note particularly lines 35-36 where both neopentyl glycol and the claimed trimethylol propane are preferred.

Response to arguments

Applicant argues the rejection of the claims as being obvious by stating

1. There are different methods of forming HPHP and that applicant uses a pure commercial product while the product of patentee's example 1 process needs post treatment and purification. Applicant states that the preparation of HPHP from HP acid and neopentyl glycol yields an inferior product. In response to this argument, the HPHP of example 10 uses the product of example 1, which is formed from hydroxypivaldehyde. See example 1. Patentee states in example that he is using hydroxypivalic acid neopentylglycol monoester. That is the same chemical as the claimed HPHP. Additionally, applicant's arguments may not be substituted for evidence in the form of a declaration.

2. Applicant next refers to examples 7 and 9 in Table 4. Those examples cannot be used to argue limitations in the instant claims as they are directed to compositions which are not claimed. Applicant argues that the solubility is unpredictable. That is even more so when esters from different polyols and acids are used.
